At approximately 3:20 p.m. on Friday, February 8, 1985 you entered room B365 where I was conducting a class (Microeconomics - 27502). You walked very noisily up the full length of the room while I was speaking, to the front, and deposited a ring binder on the teacher's desk (later found to enclose an incomplete assignment). You then turned around, and again quite noisily walked down the room and exited.

If you were not aware that your entrance and exit were disturbing to the class let it be known that it was. Furthermore, you displayed all of the worst of bad manners and total lack of respect for those of us who were involved in learning. Members of the class did not hide their surprise and disgust with your conduct. So annoyed were some that at the end of the class three of them asked that something be done about the incidence. As I had every intention of dealing with the matter I assured them that appropriate action will be taken.

This is the second consecutive semester that you are taking that same course from me. Apparently you still believe that it is possible to pass the course by making occasional visits to the classes to drop off incomplete and sloppily done assignments.

If you object to attending classes on late Friday afternoons as appears to be the case, you should take your objections to the College Administration. If it is your intention to use the Friday classes as the time and place to deposit your assignments, you must do so either before the class starts at 3:00 p.m. or after it ends at 5:00 p.m. You may not disturb the class during that period. In a class of 46 students you do not have the right to disrupt those who are serious about learning.

Should you ever again give a repeat of last Friday's display or anything close to it, or in any way disrupt the group I will ask the Dean of the School of Business to remove you from the class.
